IMPROVING PROVIDER EFFICIENCY WITH EXCEL TARGETED TRAINING

Education and training are of paramount importance to be successful in anything, including the use of an EHR. Not only do providers need to understand the tool they are using but also how to use it in their workflow. Education should be targeted to individual roles, focusing on how to use the tool both efficiently and effectively, so it becomes part of their overall professional toolbox and expertise. This will assist them in providing the best patient care possible. Optimum Healthcare IT's EXCEL targeted training approach helps providers and healthcare organizations maximize the use and benefits of their EHR.

/// TRAINING IS NOT ONE AND DONE

So how do we do this? For one, targeted training programs are primarily individual to each organization. It is important to start by clearly defining what problems exist that are interfering with attaining the organization's goals. Ask what is working and what is not working. The program will be dependent on several important considerations: your providers, your care culture, and your IT structure. Another essential component is the implementation of bi-directional training. As you are training the physicians in how to use the EHR, their feedback is helping in improving the tools and focus that the training team employs.

/// THE APPROACH

Leadership around EHR usage, training, and support should be one of shared ownership between operations, IT, and clinical all working together to help align the EHR with the organization's vision. This cohesion should include but is not limited to:

Include all clinical types in the processes, decisions, and testing

Establish a clear set of specific goals and outcomes

Commit the time and resources required to achieve any goals

Use an enterprise system to provide the training and education that are necessary for success

/// PLAN FOR SUCCESS

It is always important to be looking for ways to help providers be more efficient. If you take the time and utilize the right resources to look at the entire workflow and look at what everyone is doing to contribute to it, organizations can understand what functionality is necessary or not. Performing this assessment can help define a program that will:

REDUCE required activities that are either unnecessary, redundant, or don't work with the workflow.

PROVIDE time in the workday and workflow to complete required documentation tasks and enter data in the electronic health record.

CREATE standard order sets based on evidence-based medicine best practices that help drive standards of care and help create efficiency between care providers.

UTILIZE PEER USERS to assist with physician EHR education. This can help to make them feel like they are part of the process instead of the process wearing them down.

PROVIDE responsive information technology support. Bi-directional communication helps win more allies than anything else.

Optimizing the EHR's impact is as much about change management as it is about integration, functionality, and efficiency. Understanding where change or updates are needed based on feedback and communication is imperative to EHR success.
